

Testing the prototype in a pool confirmed this result further. For the start of the drill the prototype was held in place to counter the rotational forces. Then when let go started moving in the direction of the larger hose